This course was designed for Officers/Detectives assigned to Narcotics, Gangs, Vice/Human Trafficking, or Specialized Units. This intense three (3) day course will provide the students with the skills of stationary, foot, and mobile surveillance techniques. Surveillance is an “Art” that requires training, discipline, and patience. Most investigations involve conducting surveillance of individual(s) without being detected, which is why understanding and employing proven techniques is so important. This is an excellent course for both newer and experienced LE personnel.

Day one will consist of classroom lecture involving surveillance techniques, counter-surveillance techniques, mobile surveillance, goals/objectives of surveillance operations, field operations pre-planning, decision making and case documentation.

Day two will consist of legal use of GPS tracking devices, search warrant examples for tracking devices, equipment selection, preparation and installation. A well-known surveillance equipment supplier will be on-site for demos and technical assistance.

Day three will consist of field exercises where the students will conduct surveillance on role player(s). Decision making out in the field and case coordination will also be covered. Students will need to provide a vehicle, however HT radios are provided.
